

Born and raised in the seafood industry. Started in the salmon industry in the late 1970's flying salmon to Seattle for processing and freezing for a Japanese joint venture. Then involved in the first freezing operation for salmon in Nak Nek. From salmon to caviar technician. Then on to assisting Canadian native groups to develop their own fishery, from production to marketing. In the mid 1980's became involved with the foreign fleets(Poles and Chinese) fishing in the donut hole and the Hake joint venture supplying vessels with packaging and equipment. This included the Beck Liner. When the US Pollock industry emerged, Beck Liners evolved into the predominate business. From Beck liner distributor to a Beck liner production factory in the Seattle area. Graduated from Seattle University with a BA in Humanities and University of Washington in Business Management.